Successful Japanese Test for Bronco Stripper

The relatively small size and weight of the Bronco, the professional-grade floor stripper from Taylor Tools, proved to be ideal for the conditions found in a recent test performed in Fukuoka, Japan.

Due to the building's small elevator, typical for Japan, the second-story project was only accessible by lifting the Bronco up and through a small window, a relatively easy feat for the compact Bronco.

The stripping test itself was also successful. "The Bronco does 100% of everything that Taylor Tools said it would do," said Mr. Hirayama, the new owner.

Mr. Matsu of the Kansai Felt Co., the Japanese distributor for Taylor Tools, foresees great potential for the Bronco due to its size and weight which is well suited for the hard-to-get-to locations common throughout Japan.

Keith Papulski, General Manager of Taylor Tools, points out that the company exports more American-made products than they import, resulting in a trade surplus for the Denver-based manufacturer.
